

OUTSIDE THE FLAGS

Jim Parker,
Vice President
DFA Australia Limited

JANUARY 2016

2016 Ten Predictions to Count On

New Year is a customary time to speculate. In a digital age, when past forecasts are available online, market and media professionals find it harder to hide their blushes when their financial predictions go awry. But there are ways around that.

The ignominy that goes with making bold forecasts was highlighted in a recent newspaper article, which listed many bad calls US economists had made about 2015. These included getting the timing of the Federal Reserve's interest rate increase wrong, incorrectly calling for a rise in long-term bond yields and assuming an end to the commodity rout.<sup>1</sup>

For the broad US equity market, 22 strategists polled by the Wall Street Journal<sup>2</sup> estimated an average increase for the S&P 500 of 8.2% for 2015. The most optimistic individual forecast was for a rise of 14%. The least optimistic was 2%. No-one picked a fall. As it turned out, the benchmark ended marginally lower for the year.

In the UK, a poll of 49 fund managers, traders and strategists published in early January 2015 forecast the FTSE 100 index would be at 6,800 by mid-year and 7,000 points by year-end. As it turned out, the FTSE surpassed that year-end target by late April to hit a record high of 7103, before retracing to 6242 by year-end.<sup>3</sup>

Australian economists were little better. A January 2015 Fairfax Media poll found the consensus view was that local official interest rates would stay on hold all year. The Reserve Bank of Australia proved that wrong a month later, before cutting rates again in May.

It shouldn't be a surprise that if economists can't get the broad variables right, it must be tough for stock analysts to pick winners. Even a stock like Apple, which for so many years surprised on the upside, disappointed some forecasters last year with a 4.6% decline.<sup>4</sup>

In Australia, among the "Top Picks for 2015" published by one media outlet a year ago were such names as Woodside Petroleum, BHP Billiton, Origin Energy and Slater & Gordon, all of which suffered double-digit losses in the past year.<sup>5</sup>

1. Malcolm Maiden, "The Year Market Economists Failed to See Coming," SMH, 30 December 2015
2. "Strategists Expect Stocks to Keep Climbing in 2015," WSJ, 2 January 2015
3. "Five Fund Strategies to Ride Rising Markets," The Times, 3 January 2015
4. "Seven Stocks to Buy for 2015," CNN Money, 31 December 2014
5. "Top Stock Picks for 2015," Motley Fool

It should be evident by now that setting your investment course based on someone's stock picks or expectations for interest rates, the economy or currencies is not a viable way of building wealth in the long term. Markets have a way of confounding your expectations. So the better option is stay broadly diversified and, with the help of an adviser, set an asset allocation that matches your own risk appetite, goals and circumstances.

Of course, this doesn't stop you or anyone else having or expressing an opinion about the future. We are all free to speculate about what might happen in the economy and markets. The danger is when you base your investment strategy on an opinion.

In the meantime, if you insist on setting store by forecasts, here is a list of ten predictions you can count on coming true in 2016:

1. Markets will go up some of the time and down some of the time.
2. There will be unexpected news. Some of this will move prices.
3. Acres of newsprint will be devoted to the likely path of interest rates.
4. Acres more will speculate on China's growth outlook.
5. TV pundits will frequently and loudly debate short-term market direction.

6. Some economies will strengthen. Others will weaken. These change year to year.
7. Some companies will prosper. Others will falter. These change year to year.
8. Parts of your portfolio will do better than other parts. We don't know which.
9. A new book will say the rules no longer work and everything has changed.
10. Another new book will say nothing has really changed and the old rules still apply.

You can see from that list that if forecasts are so hard to get right, you are better off keeping them as generic as possible. Like a weather forecaster predicting wind, hail, heat and cold over a single day, your audience will prepare themselves for all climates.

The future is always uncertain. There are always unexpected events. Some will turn out worse than you expect; others will turn out better. The only sustainable approach to that uncertainty is to focus on what you can control.

In the meantime, let me wish a happy New Year to you all.

“Outside the Flags” began as a weekly web column on Dimensional Fund Advisors’ website in 2006. The articles are designed to help advisors communicate with their clients about the principles of good investment—working with markets, understanding risk and return, broadly diversifying and focusing on elements within the investor’s control—including portfolio structure, fees, taxes, and discipline. Jim’s flags metaphor has been taken up and recognised by Australia’s corporate regulator in its own investor education program.

For more articles, visit Dimensional’s client site at my.dimensional.com/insight/outside\_the\_flags

This material is directed exclusively at persons who are experienced or existing investors in the products described in this document, who are professional customers as defined by the rules of the Financial Conduct Authority or are otherwise eligible under these rules. It is not intended for retail customers and such persons should not rely on this material. Moreover, any investment or service to which this material may relate, will not be made available to such retail customers. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results and the investment objectives of the Fund may not be met.

It is provided for information purposes and intended for your use only and does not constitute an invitation or offer to subscribe for or purchase any of the products or services mentioned. It is the responsibility of any persons wishing to make a purchase to inform themselves of and observe all applicable laws and regulations. Any entity responsible for forwarding this material to other parties takes responsibility for ensuring compliance with all financial promotion laws, rules and regulations. The information provided is not intended to provide a sufficient basis on which to make an investment decision. Information and opinions presented in this material have been obtained or derived from sources believed by Dimensional Fund Advisors Ltd. to be reliable, but Dimensional Fund Advisors Ltd. makes no representation as to their accuracy or completeness. Dimensional Fund Advisors Ltd. accepts no liability for loss arising from the use of this material.